FORD MEETS MISS DEAF AMERICAS

Pam Young, the current Miss Deaf America, and Ann Billington Bahl, a former holder of the title, met with President Ford at the White House on April 8. Pam and Ann, who were in town to participate in Alumni Committee meetings on campus, presented the President with an "I Love You Pin."

Both 1974 Gallaudet graduates, Pam is a graduate student at the University of Tennessee; and Ann is teaching at the St. Paul Technical/Vocational Institute. Lottie Riekehof served as interpreter.

EXHIBIT ATTRACTING GOOD CROWDS

Since its opening on January 19, the LOOK OF SOUND has attracted more than 1700 visitors. The exhibit is currently being staffed by a group of volunteers who after participating in a three-day orientation and training program started serving as educational guides. The volunteers include: Jan DeLap, Cecilia Delgado, Verna Domich, Wanda Hicks, Susan Karpel, Ruth Phillips, Jacqueline Stover and Bob Stuckey.

Additional people are urgently needed to volunteer during weekdays as well as weekends. Please contact Judy Bortner if you know of any interested potential volunteers.

SIGN LANGUAGE PRACTICE

If you need practice in improving your receptive sign language skills, tune in to Channel 6 over our closed circuit TV system between the hours of 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Friday.

HEARING AID REGULATIONS PROPOSED

The Federal Trade Commission has proposed regulations covering the hearing aid industry which will provide greater protection for consumers. These regulations cover such areas as advertising, buyers' rights, selling techniques and misrepresentations by sellers.

The National Center for Law and the Deaf has reserved the morning of Friday, April 23, for testifying, calling witnesses and presenting evidence at the administrative hearings scheduled by the FTC. If you are interested in participating, please contact the Law Center.
